It is all right, and every effort is being made by the people of the place to have summer tourists spend their summer there, and the writer thought that no better place could be selected. While there I was permitted to meet Mr. J. W. Bodley, so well known to all Wheeling people. I nearth his name spoken by many of the people, and always in terms of the highest praise. He surely enjoys an enviable reputation, and one that is richly deserved. On our arrival at this place we found coal fires burning in the office, which reminded us we had passed into a different climate from the one enjoyed for the past month at Wheeling. Just think of it, ye inhabitants of the metropolis of West Virginia! Sitting around a coal fire for the past month! But that is just what we found here, and it was no discomfort either.

Valley. --

Sites in the World. Martin's Ferry is one of the very best towns on the Ohio river below Pittsburgh, and from the standpoint of the number of inhabitants, is probably the largest manufacturing town on the Ohio side of the river. Its manufacturing plants are many and diverfied and they are not only increasing in themselves, but are being constantly added to, the two-latest being the Beaumont/Glass Company and the Stanton Heater Company, and there is room for many more, and they are wanted and financial encouragement will given to all concerns of merit, that employs labor. Martin's Ferry has all the city advantages, in electric lights, the finest water works in the state, electric car connections with Wheeling Benwood and Moundsville, West Virginia, and Bridgeport and Bellaire, O. and they have many other advantages that go to induce other manufacturing plants, one being the fact that coal is mired and run right into the furnace room without a cent of freight charges. Handsome homes are seen everywhere.

William Mann, has one of the oldest foundries in the valley, and makes a specialty of mill and blast furnaces, and recently made the castings for the big mill at Mingo, and much of his work can be found in every mill in the valley and he is now crowded with orders and working overtime. George W. Reece. the real estate agent, would be pleased to answer questions about Martin's Ferry.

L. Spence & Son are among the most progressive men in Martin's Ferry, and they are financially interested in many of the manufacturing and commercial institutions of the place. They manufacture portable and stationary engines.

But the beer of the ancient days was not the beer of the ancient days was not the beer of to-day, as no life and health giving malts were used. Hops were first used in England during the reign of Henry VIII, and so unpopular was its use that parliament was petitioned against it, saying the "Wicked weed would spoil the beer," but the beverage made with barley malt and hops became popular during the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

In the meantime the Germans were busy perfecting the brewing of beer and to them must be given the credit of the present high state of excellence attained by American beers. In brewing beer the water used must be pure and with this fact before them, the Belmont Brewing Company, when they decided to locate in Martin's Ferry, first ascertained that the best of water was obtainable and plenty of it, and even then it is distilled and all the ways known to science are used to make all water that enters into the manufacture of Belmont beer absolutely pure.

The Belmont Brewing Company commenced business in 1891 and now occupies a handsome four-story brick structure, having a frontage of 310 feet on Jefferson street and 196 feet on Washington street, with an annual capacity of 40,000 barrels, and the fact that their output is rapidly increasing is evidenced by the emphatife calls for it at all the bars, in Martin's Ferry, Wheeling and vicinity, shown its popularity among the users of the brown a new industry for Bridgeport. The two real estate companies stand ready to push along any enterprise of merit, using both management and cash, Bridgeport is the home of the great Asina-Standard steel plant, the Crystal glass works, besides many small man ufacturing plants. It has excellent schools, water works, electric lights ar towns; two banks and all the advant ages that go to make up a hustling, booming city. Just at present over two miles of streets are being paved with brick. As a residence city, the hilis back of the town furnish better and more handsome sites than the famous Wainut Hills in Clincinnati. Bridgeport is destined to become the model city of eastern Ohio.

Bridgeport has many enthusiastic hustlers, but none have the future interest of the town more at heart than Hon. J. C. Heinlein, of the law firm of Driggs & Heinlein. He is a leader in all enterprises that he engages in, a spirit that made him a leader among the Republicans while he was for two terms a member of the Ohio legislature. Mr. Heinlein is a firm believer that Bridgeport is just entering a period of prosperity that will make her the leading city in Belmont county. The firm of Driggs & Heinlein are probably the strongest law firm in Belmont county, and they have a very large practice in facture portable and stationary engines, threshers, and are dealers in general mill supplies, and was established in 1859. Mr. L. R. T. Howell, president of the Kirkwood Company, can tell all about it, and would be pleased to answer questions. Mr. Howell has been in Bridgeport for many years, and is a Bridgeport boomer. The two companies have nearly 600 acres; some of it has already been platted out and has many fine residences on the land. daylight came, which was about the time we struck the Cheat river grade my mind was fully taken up in noting the different places passed, the improvements taking place, etc. Mountain Lake Park and Deer Park looked cool and pleasant as we were whired past them on our way. The seventeenille grade looked just as it did when the writer first saw it in 1882, and so it will continue for years to come. Keyser and Cumberland are very different from what they were in war times and as we passed them many things come to my mind that took place during those stirring times. As we approached the old Shenandoch Valley, where we did so much service during the sumer of 1846 especially, I was almost inthe different places passed, the im
